> "Behaviour makes sense when we take the time to understand the person behind it."

Morgan is a warm and approachable Positive Behaviour Support Practitioner with a Bachelor of Psychological Science and is currently undertaking postgraduate studies in psychology. Her experience also includes equine-assisted and art-assisted approaches, which has shaped her interest in finding different ways to connect with and understand people.

Morgan particularly enjoys working with children, young people and individuals with complex support needs. She has a strong interest in how the brain responds and adapts to our environment and experiences, and how this interacts with our individual strengths and interests to shape development and behaviour. Her approach is strengths-based and collaborative, working alongside participants, families, support teams and other allied health professionals to build on each person's individual strengths and interests.

Outside of work, Morgan enjoys spending time with her three children and being outdoors.
